Rural Transpo

They say “when you dream, dream big”!

I’m sure when a small group of people gathered around the kitchen table in 1970 to talk about transportation in Missouri, they never knew just how big their dream would become.

From a small pilot project providing transportation in eight mid-Missouri counties with only 3 vehicles, these amazing pioneers turned three vehicles and five drivers into a multi-million dollar company with more than 600 buses and employees, and 11 offices covering 87 counties in the state.

The end of the year brings about many reports talking about numbers; and our numbers are impressive. But from the beginning, OATS Transit has always been more about People. When looking through the archive of photos for the front page collage, there were far more smiling faces to choose from than vehicles.

When I think about what it’s like to lead an organization like this one, I feel privileged. 50 years in the making, it’s clear that we’ve come from a long line of leaders with a drive to have an impact for our state and communities. I still call upon the first general manager of OATS Transit – Peter Schauer – for guidance and advice and count Linda Yaeger (Operations and then Executive Director from 1978-2012) as a friend and mentor. And no reminiscing about our history is complete without thoughts of former President Nolan McNeill who passed away in 2019 after volunteering for over 30 years on our Board.

It’s astonishing to think how far we’ve come. That from a small group of passionate volunteers with the vision to get rural Missourian seniors where they needed to go, we’ve grown into a renowned industry leader.

Born to meet the increasing needs of a rural population, we’ve since expanded our reach to a far wider demographic. And here we stand today, five decades on, with one remarkable story to tell – a story with many chapters yet to come.

To follow our journey to 50 years, look for stories in this and other issues of The Wheel and on our website. And don’t forget to celebrate with us on Facebook, Youtube and Twitter throughout the next 365 days!

Dorothy J. Yeager, Executive Director

Transportation 50 Years in the Making!

1970 A group of Missouri volunteers attended a White House conference on Aging in Washington DC.

1971 Cooperative Transportation Service was formed & its first 3 buses rolled out on November 1.

1973 Service grew to encompass 88 counties in the state in just two short years.

1973 The company became a non-profit and changed the name to Older Adults Transportation Service.

1980 With the help of federal funds, service was expanded to include the rural general public, and our name was shortened to OATS, Inc.

1981 OATS grew to 231 employees with 134 buses, 1,012 volunteers and 20,000 members.

1999 OATS began its first city service in Sedalia MO, followed by 20 more cities in the years to follow.

2003 When a St. Louis provider suddenly closed, OATS quickly stepped in to begin its first urban service. 50 of that provider's drivers joined the OATS team.

2004 A new headquarters was constructed in Columbia, where the home office & MidMO operations now reside.

2011 A regional office was constructed in St. Joseph MO, followed by Bridgeton in 2012, Macon in 2013, and Springfield in 2014.

2018 OATS updated its logo, which blended the original block lettering with a new tagline (Operating Above The Standard) and pop of blue color.

2021 50 Years in business and still growing! Last year we provided 1 million trips with more than 600 buses.
